Drawing upon years of research and practical experience, DiAngelo challenges readers to confront the deep-seated biases and power dynamics that shape our interactions across lines of race, gender, class, and other social identities. She argues that these biases are not simply individual prejudices, but rather deeply ingrained in our institutions and societies. As a result, they can have a profound impact on our ability to communicate, collaborate, and make decisions.

DiAngelo's analysis is both unflinching and compassionate. She does not shy away from the difficult truths about our world, but she also offers hope and practical guidance for creating a more just and equitable future. Through personal anecdotes, case studies, and exercises, she helps readers to understand the challenges and opportunities of intergroup leadership and provides tools for creating more inclusive environments.

Intergroup Leadership in a World of Difference is a must-read for anyone who wants to be an effective leader in today's diverse world. It is a book that will challenge your assumptions, expand your understanding, and empower you to create a more just and equitable future.
